Current Comment

The merry Yuletide is practically with us again, and shortly the proverbial log will be placed lovingly in the fireplace. A scarce article, yule logs, and the aforementioned ceremony will, in many cases, be displaced by the hurling of a handful of prune wood into the old airtight heater. Anyway, the heater's warmer.

Then, romping along behind, treading on St. Nick's coat-tails, so to speak, will come the new year. And with it a lot of new resolutions. We're going to make a new one, too—and keep it. We're going to forsake the editorial "we," time-honored as it is, and, at the risk of appearing conceited, henceforth personally take whatever blame or credit accrues to this column. In other words, "we" cease to say; "I" am going to do the talking in the future, and anyone who wishes to take issue with the writer will know whom to address. There never was more than one fellow writing this column, so why should I keep up the silly pretense?

The universal "we" custom must have originated in the days before people had a clear understanding of the meaning of "free" press—with intent to deceive, and to make irate citizens think twice before tackling an editorial staff of unknown strength to whose remarks he had taken exception. In these enlightened times, however, most people realize that the personal element enters very little into the average editorial; therefore, we'll—I'll—say what I believe is best to say, and to blazes with the consequences. And, by the same token, there are a lot of things which should be said that I will not, for good and sufficient reasons, touch upon at all.

All this talk about resolutions is a little premature. I started out on a merry Christmas meander, and so I'll continue. Well, with the fire, no matter what kind as long as it's hot, blazing merrily, we'll all gather round, toast our shins, and wonder why, with each passing year, we become less and less interested in the visit of Santa Claus.

I find that many adults experience the same feeling about this time of year, and a contributing factor thereto may be found in the remarks of a friend who, departing in unbecoming haste from the early morning cheerlessness of the Press office, uttered that which, freely translated by myself, follows:

A cold and bleak December wind
Goes whistling through my jeans;
It searches out the pocket where
I used to keep some 'beans."

But the dough is gone, by heck—by check,
From out that cozy nook,
And the wintry blast moans softly past
The stubs in the empty book.

It's an ill wind that does not blow somebody into the money, however, and in this case somebody is anybody who has to sell anything that to somebody resembles a Christmas present for some one. Classy, eh? Yeah, even the poor printer nets a few dollars out of the annual frenzy, what with the Christmas card racket, and all. (Creditors take note: It wasn't very much).

And how the kids still go for Christmas. Most of them understand all about Santa Claus, but they like it just the same. Year after year a new crop of youngsters receive the usual Christmas toys, and shortly wreck them just as thoroughly as little Johnny did last year, and Willie the year before. Which brings to mind a recently-read indictment of practically all mechanical toys.

The writer of the article, a keen student of child psychology, at least where amusement is concerned, decries the "finished" toy as a thing which stifles the imagination and inventive genius of the average youngster. I think he's on the right track. A gimcrack which fails to stimulate a child's imagination is soon tired of, and Christmas night finds the weary little celebrants building a "tran" out of the boxes their toys came in.

The foregoing observations lead us to the pitiful plight of the grown man or woman who has reached the age of retirement without having acquired a hobby, appreciation of music, or appreciation of literature somewhere along the road. The individual who goes through life depending upon "mechanical" entertainment is storing up for himself a dreary period of inactivity and consequent boredom.

Well, I succeeded in meandering, all right enough. Just a touch here and there, with just enough sense in the whole to make it fairly worth while.

High Basketeers Trounce S. C. In Double-Header

Campbell high school basketball teams demonstrated their superiority over the product of Santa Clara Friday night when they gave the boys from the neighboring village a drubbing the like of which has not been seen in these parts for some time.

The 130-pound boys opened the festivities, which resulted in a score of 25-13. Condensa was high gun, tallying 12 of the 25 points. Bloom followed with 8; Frank 4, and Mattusch, 1. It was a highly diverting game.

That the Santa Clarans were unable to get beyond 13 in their try for points was again demonstrated in the main event of the evening, a tilt between unlimited teams of the two schools, the conclusion of which found the visitors in possession of the unlucky 13, while Campbell had 34 points.

A well-matched exhibition, as far as beef was concerned, Campbell boys holding their own nicely when Santa Clara introduced a bit of rough play into the game. Cook, cool even when, with the game in the bag, Coach Noddin sent in four substitutes for the last few minutes, was master of the situation at all times. He accounted for 20 points, Cramer 8, Person 4, and Stojanovich 2.

At Live Oak this Friday Coach Noddin will start, in the 130's, Bloom, Condensa, forwards; Brydon, center; Lear, Mattusch, guards. In the unlimited class, Cramer, Person, forwards; Cook, center; Hocking, Stojanovich, at the guard positions.

First Move In Steps To Widen Highway

First steps to widen Campbell avenue between the town and Johnson avenue were taken this week when P. G. & E. crews removed the poles which were on the recently acquired property formerly used by the Peninsula railroad as a right of way.

Merry Christmas Party Enjoyed by Country Women

Members of the Country Woman's club celebrated Christmas Monday with a most interesting program of varied numbers presented in a lovely Yuletide setting.

The chairs had been arranged in a semicircle facing the fireplace, which had been made the center of the scene. The mantel was decked with evergreen and trailing branches of catoneaster. Baskets which were soon filled with gay Christmas parcels to help bring holiday cheer to the needy and those to whom the season does not mean so much, adorned the hearth, and a cheerful fire completed the picture.

A profusion of the same lovely greenery and berries adorned tables and platform. With drawn shades, lights and the glow of a number of red tapers, everyone felt the joy of the holiday time.

The short business meeting was concluded with the reading of the club collect, changed to the first person singular, making of it a more personal petition.

Mrs. Andrew W. Johnson presided over the program hour, and after welcoming the members and guests introduced Miss Sybil C. Hayes, who told most entertainingly of two Christmas seasons which she spent abroad. The first was spent in the little Italian town of Malfi, not far from Naples.

The observance of Christmas in most of southern Europe is very largely religious, with processions, masses, and reverent depiction of the stable scene by the use of miniature figures of people and animals.

The second Christmas was spent in Paris, where gift giving is a little more general than in Italy, but not at all like our country with its crowds of holiday shoppers.

Mrs. Ralph H. Hyde led in the singing of three of the favorite Christmas carols for which Mrs. George S. Robson was accompanist.

A charming Christmas story in which humor and pathos were confined in the teaching of a real lesson, was read by Mrs. Harry C. Smith. The title of the booklet is "The Little Mixer," written by Lillian Nicholson Shearon, and it is a nice gift.

Miss Alma Lowry Williams of the state college faculty, and leader and organizer of the Bell Canto club, a member of the Pen Women and of the Poetry club, presented the concluding number which was the reading of two original poems. The first, a prize-winning sonnet, "The Guiding Star," published in a limited edition of poems brought out by James D. Phelan in 1926, "A Day In the Hills." The second was a longer one read at a recent meeting of the Pen Women, "The Inn Keeper of Bethlehem."

Delicious home-made candy was served while a social time was enjoyed.

Other members of the committee of the day were Mrs. Lloyd C. Shank and Mrs. John C. Ainsley. Mrs. Chauncey H. Whitman, chairman of the year's program committee, assisted in making the candy.

The next meeting of the club will be on Jan. 8, as the first Monday falls upon Jan. 1, and the subject of the forum will be, "Women—What They Are Doing Today."

Campbell Youth Faces Grave Charge In County Lock-up

Unable to raise $10,000 cash bail, Antone Turturici, 18, of Campbell, is confined in the county jail facing a charge of manslaughter growing out of a fatal crash in which he was involved Thanksgiving night at the intersection of Hamilton and Johnson avenues.

The local youth's car collided with an automobile driven by Walter Ashley, 24, Santa Cruz, who was accompanied by Miss Rita Quinn, also of that city. Ashley received a fractured skull in the accident, and later died at the county hospital. Miss Quinn was treated at the county hospital for severe lacerations and internal injuries. Turturici required but little medical attention.

Following Ashley's death, the young man's father, Albert H. Ashley, swore to the complaint charging Turturici with manslaughter. He was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Grandin Miller who set the preliminary hearing for Dec. 21 at 2 o'clock.

Getting closer to home, Campbell refused to o.k. the water plan by a vote of 272 no's against 124 assenting ballots.

RAY RANDALL, NEW ADVER. MAN FOR PRUNE GROWERS

Ray Randall, well-known pacific coast advertising executive, will become advertising manager of the United Prune Growers of California, effective immediately, according to announcement made today by Edwin W. Stillwell, general manager of that organization.

Randall has had extensive experience in dried fruit merchandising and has served in important executive capacities with several California fruit growers' cooperatives.

He formerly was advertising manager for the Sun-Maid Raisin Growers of California and previous to that was in charge of the advertising department of the California Prune and Apricot Growers association. He also has been responsibly connected with several advertising agencies.

Randall succeeds Norton W. Mogge who resigned as advertising manager of the United Prune Growers of California several weeks ago to accept a position with a large national advertising agency.

In announcing Randall' oppointment, Stillwell stated this morning, "We are highly pleased that we have been able to secure the services of Ray Randall as advertising manager of our statewide growers' cooperative association. His wide experience in dried fruit merchandising and his thorough understanding of both the marketing and growers problems of cooperative organizations, we feel will be of great help to us."

Mack Ross and Jack Murdock visited the latter's parents and sister in Georgetown over the week-end.

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary Agricultural Council of California

If a gigantic public works program—the greatest in American history—is capable of transposing depression into recovery, the new year, just ahead, holds much of promise for California agriculture.

This is indicated by authoritative information from Washington that President Roosevelt, when congress reconvenes, will ask an additional public works appropriation to relieve unemployment, and speed business recovery, of at least two billion dollars. There are strong indications that the new appropriation will be voted soon after the reconvening of congress in January, making available a total public works fund of more than four billion dollars.

The goal of the public works administration is to re-employ every idle worker in the United States by this tremendous offensive against depression and business stagnation.

And every jobless man taken from charity rolls and placed on pay rolls means another buyer for farm products. It means that millions of families, instead of purchasing the bare necessities, will resume normal buying. And that is of especial importance to California agriculture, in view of the fact that this state produces many of the so-called "luxury commodities."

No one, including the President himself, can safely prophesy the outcome of this stupendous program of trade stimulation. It is safe to predict, however, that it will at least bring temporary benefits to every line of trade and industry, including agriculture. It is the hope of national leaders that by the time this great public works program is completed, general business will have improved to such an extent as to carry on where "artificial respiration" left off.

The full advantage of the Roosevelt public works campaign will be evidenced, in all probability, during 1934. Much of the original public works appropriation of more than two billion dollars, while it has been allocated, is not yet definitely at work. These projects will actually get under way during the coming year, together with the new projects proposed under the additional two billion dollar appropriation, and the greatest spur to business recovery should be felt during the coming 12 months.

The California farmer, looking forward to the new year, must inevitably pin his hopes for increased market demand and increased cash returns on the President's program. If it succeeds, agriculture, for the first time in several years, may expect an upswing in general business conditions and a consequent improvement in buying power.

This much can be said for President Roosevelt's program, regardless of how economists may differ on its basic soundness: It has already lifted public morale by substituting certainty for uncertainty during the coming winter, for many thousands of bread-winners and their dependents.

And to date no one has brought forward any other program which offers better possibilities. California farmers, and Californians generally, regardless of whether they are Republicans or Democrats, and irrespective of partisanship entirely, must place their faith and hope in the President's daring drive to rehabilitate American industries and wipe out poverty and privation.

KIWANIS NOTES
By Heck

Kiwanians Tuesday were made acquainted with the high lights of the proposed county charter by Harry Mitchell, chairman of the board of freeholders who drew up the plan.

Chief among the many features are the facts that a board of five elected supervisors will direct local legislation; that all county engineering will be directed by the county surveyor; that a county executive and auditor be one and the same; that there will be an oppointed commission of seven to direct health and welfare work and that a merit commission of nine be selected, one each, from the nine union high school districts in the county. The offices of tax collector and assessor would be combined under the new charter, Mitchell said, as would those of sheriff and coroner. All officers other than supervisors to be appointive.

The charter, Mr. Mitchell explained, represents the will of a two-thirds majority of the board, he, as chairman, having insisted on that ruling at the start of deliberations.

is the time to prevent rickets

EXPECTANT mother, what if your child should develop rickets (softening of the bones) — that dread affliction of early childhood which so often leads to deformities?

Usually it is due to malnutrition — during pregnancy as well as after birth. Guard against it before baby arrives. You can take nothing finer than Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. Its abundance of precious vitamin D helps to build strong bones and, later, sound teeth.

And of vitamin A one tablespoonful of Scott's Emulsion contains more than does a whole quart of milk. Just what mother and child both need for health to ward off "colds" and the many more serious complications that so often follow!

Scott's Emulsion is trustworthy, pure, efficacious. Sixty years on the market —and better today than ever. All druggists — 60c and $1.20.

American Minister Buys First Danish Christmas Seals

Continues a Custom and Pays a Tribute

MRS. RUTH BRYAN OWEN, American minister to Denmark, is shown buying the first sheet of 1933 Danish Christmas Seals from a letter carrier before the central post office in Copenhagen. He is holding an enlarged replica of the Danish seal. Inset shows the American Christmas Seal. Mrs. Owen decorated her holiday mail and gifts to friends in Florida with the seals. The Christmas Seal idea, as a means of raising funds to fight tuberculosis, was originated by a Danish postmaster, Einar Holboell, in 1904 and was adopted in the United States in 1907. In Denmark the seals are purchased at postoffice windows. Here they are sold by the affiliated tuberculosis associations.

"Now, while you are sending off your Christmas mail from Santa Clara valley to the east, is the time to make sure you are using a Christmas seal on every letter, postcard, and package," said Dr. C. K. Canelo, director of the tuberculosis association of this county, in an appeal for the annual seal sale.

"The use of Christmas seals proclaims to the world a community's belief in and support of the finer values of community life. Each seal advertises your home city as one in which better health and mutual good-will and help is esteemed."

Dr. Canelo continued: "The people of California can always be counted on to respond to the appeal of the tuberculosis associations. They may mislay their seal sale letters and neglect to answer them at once, but finally they send in their contributions. If they only realized, however, the valuable publicity given our cause by the early use of the colorful Christmas seals, they would not wait, but would start to use them as soon as they received their letter.

"If you look over the incoming foreign mail, you will find Christmas seals, similar to those sold in this country, on the mail from all European countries, from China and Japan, from every civilized country in the world. Every seal you receive shows that in the county and community from which it came, anti-tuberculosis work is being carried on by an enlightened people."

The tuberculosis associations of the United States are engaged in the 27th anual seal sale. From the first sale, tuberculosis has been reduced two-thirds. The funds the local association receives at this time will finance the work in the community for the coming year.

REGRETS DECISION

It was with a great deal of interest and pleasure that I recently learned that our board of high school trustees was contemplating a move to determine the feasibility of securing government aid to construct a new high school in this district. It is with sincere regret and sadness that I have since learned that this board has voted to rescind their former intention, and to go no further under the contemplated arrangements.

I believe that this action has come about as the result of the attitude of certain individuals, as expressed by them at a recent meeting held in the grammar school, which I personally attended. At this meeting a general discussion was requested by the chairman, and and I do not know of a single individual present who disagreed on the point of actually needing a new school. Several expressed opinions opposing the idea of building at this time, and it is not my intention to criticize or take issue with anyone on ths point, but to merely show, if I can, why I believe that to build the much needed school at this time is a sound business move and a great saving to the whole district.

To begin with, the board has stated that $150,000 will be ample to cover the entire cost of the proposed building. Now let us first of all have confidence in the honesty and integrity of our board, and believe their statement. It is possible to get from the government as high as 28 per cent of this amount as an outright gift, and the balance will be loaned at four per cent over a period of 25 years, and further, these payments may be deferred for five years, before starting to pay off the bonds. True it is that the interest will amount to the original outright gift, which will eventually amount to a loan of $150,000 over a 25 year period with no interest. Now, I ask in all fairness, could anything be handed to a community in a better, and more attractive manner than this?

To sum up the whole thing briefly, we would have the opportunity of building the much needed school at $6,000 per year for 25 years; in other words, on the installment basis, if you please, and when you consider that we would still have five years before we started paying those installments it really seems a downright shame that the tax-payers of this district should let such a real opportunity go unused.

It is not my idea, contrary to the belief of some, to load any more unnecessary taxes on anyone, nor do I consider this proposal as doing so inasmuch as the saving at this time would more than offset the added expense which delay will inevitably cause. I think that if those who are now opposed will consider the present situation in an unbiased, hard-headed business way, leaving out all personalities and unfair prejudices, that nearly all will finally conclude that cooperation between the whole district, our trustees and the government agencies, will solve our problem of the high school for many years, and will end this long controversy.
